

A black and white photograph capturing the aftermath of an earthquake. The background is dominated by the skeletal remains of a building, with twisted metal beams and crumbling masonry. In the foreground, several individuals are visible. A person in the center-left wears a dark, heavy jacket and a striped beanie, their back to the camera. To their right, another person is partially visible, also in dark clothing. On the far right, a man with a beard and glasses, wearing a dark hooded jacket, looks towards the camera with his hands held out. The overall atmosphere is one of devastation and human suffering.
